Students from Red Bay Primary and Montessori By The Sea Schools win CUC's Essay Competition

Eleven year-old Josh Levy of Red Bay Primary School and 12 year-old Jordan Trickett of Montessori By The Sea are the winners of 2013 CUC Essay Competitions. Seventeen essays were submitted.

The competition was launched in October last year and had as its theme, "Electricity: It is more than poles and wires."

The students were asked to imagine that our island were without electricity for one week and to describe what life would be like for the island, our businesses, schools and at our homes during that week.

CUC's President and CEO Richard Hew, said, "I am delighted with the response we received to the Essay Competition. The students wrote passionately about the subject and clearly understand through their own research what life would be like without a reliable electricity service. It is interesting that very young minds within our community already have a true appreciation for the value of electricity and what it means to the ongoing growth and development of Grand Cayman."
